SUPPLEMENT

CONTAINING

MEMORABILIA ET NOTABILIA.

The Corporation of the University has recently approved the action of the Law School Faculty in recommending a three years' course for obtaining the degree of LL.B. This important change, which has been contemplated for some time, will meet the growing demand for higher qualification in students seeking admission to the Bar. The standard of the school will thus be advanced and the student will receive a preparation which will stand comparison with that of any law course in the country. The third year's required work will be largely composed of the more practical subjects now pursued in the M.L. course. The other M.L. studies will probably be optional. It is intended, however, that the course may be taken in two years by college graduates and others who have the necessary qualifications. The change will take effect in September, 1896.

* * *

Dr. John A. Robinson has tendered his resignation as Librarian of the Yale Law School, the same to take effect January 1, 1895. He will be succeeded by William Trumbull of the class of '89 (B.A. Yale, 1883). The latter once received honorable mention for the John A. Porter prize, and has recently assisted in preparing the new edition of Baldwin's Connecticut Digest.

* * *

Prof. William C. Robinson recently assured the Senior class that he had not accepted the offer to go to the Catholic University at Washington, and that his connection with the Yale Law School would continue as before.

* * *

SUPPLEMENT

CONTAINING

MEMORABILIA ET NOTABILIA.

The new Law School building, when completed, will afford facilities and equipment second to no other in the country. The larger section has just been finished, and will be occupied after the Spring recess. The dimensions of the part already completed are seventy-three feet by eighty-eight feet. It is three stories high and is constructed of brick. A broad iron staircase finished in copper electroplate leads from the vestibule, at the entrance, to the third story. The adjacent walls are of mottled brick, and the floor on each landing is laid with Mosaic tile. The first and second stories contain two recitation rooms each, besides individual rooms for the Dean and Professors, while the third story contains the library and one large recitation room, seventy feet by thirty feet. The library is provided with improved iron racks and adjustable shelves. The basement affords a large lounging room, a locker room with about two hundred lockers, and a finely appointed toilet room. Great care has been taken that heating and ventilating of the whole building be regulated by the most approved methods. The rooms will be exceptionally well lighted owing to the number of large windows. The front section of the building when completed, will present a classic design of ornamentation, and will have a facade of Pompeian brick with terra cotta and cut stone trimmings.

* * *

F. W. Shillitto, an expert accountant of New Haven, will give an optional course on "The Theory and Practice of Individual and Corporation Accounts," to be open to all classes in the School. The exercises will occupy one hour a week for the remainder of the year.

* * *

The publication of the Yale Shingle has been assigned to F. J. Brown and F. E. Donnelly of the Senior class. The work will be more elaborate and complete than in previous years. An important addition will be the insertion of individual half tone portraits of each member of the graduating class.

* * *

Mr. Buckland is to be congratulated for his success with the Junior class in presenting the difficult subject of Evidence. In a recent examination of seventy students, eleven stood between 70 and 80, nineteen stood between 80 and 90, and twenty-two stood between 90 and 100. The class average was 78.5.

* * *

SUPPLEMENT

CONTAINING

MEMORABILIA ET NOTABILIA.

The formal opening of the new Law School building was held Friday, April 26th. There was a large gathering, including the Faculty, President Dwight, and members of the Connecticut Bar. Speeches were made by President Dwight, ex-Governor Morris, and Judge Loomis, commendatory of the enterprise which had obtained the new building, and of the excellent equipment and orderly arrangement as shown therein. Professors Wayland, Phelps, Robinson, and Baldwin responded for the Faculty, expressing their satisfaction at the realization of a new home which had been secured by the generous coöperation of many of those present.

* * *

The most liberal donor to the fund by which the present building was erected, is J. W. Hendrie, Esq., Yale '51, a classmate of Dr. D. T. Munger and J. W. Noble, ex-Secretary of the Interior. His donation was $15,000. The next largest gift, of $10,000, was presented by Henry F. English, '74 L. S. It is hoped that within a short time sufficient funds will be contributed with which to complete the front of the building.

* * *

The Faculty have under consideration the question whether those Seniors who will take the Connecticut Bar examinations must accept this as a final test for a degree or whether they will be given the additional opportunity, in case of failure, to try the regular school examinations.

* * *

Professor Robinson's Moot Court for the trial of issues of fact adjourned May 1 until the fall term. It is the unanimous opinion of the Senior Class that the work in this court has been entirely successful. Reality has entered into the proceedings, and the interest has been maintained throughout the year. Professor Robinson is to be congratulated upon the year's experience.

* * *

The annual debate with Princeton was held at the Hyperion Theatre May 1. Hon. H. E. Howland, Yale '54, presided. The
