

Contributors' Notes

Sally Engle Merry is Associate Professor of Anthropology at Wellesley College. She is the author of Urban Danger: Life in a Neighborhood of Strangers (1981) and Getting Justice and Getting Even: Legal Consciousness Among Working-Class Americans (1990).

Carol M. Rose is Professor of Law at Yale Law School. Her teaching and research fields are in the areas of property law, natural resource law, and legal history.

Brook Thomas follows the ups and downs of the Baltimore Orioles from points as distant as Constance in the Federal Republic of Germany, where he wrote this essay, and Irvine, California, where he teaches in the English Department of the University of California. He has published Cross-Examinations of Law and Literature.

Lief Carter is Professor of Political Science at the University of Georgia. He holds both an LL.B. (Harvard, 1965) and a Ph.D. (Berkeley, 1972). His books include The Limits of Order (1974), Contemporary Constitutional Lawmaking (1985), and Reason in Law (3rd ed. 1988). He is an amateur harpsichordist and choir director.

Cass R. Sunstein is Karl N. Llewellyn Professor of Jurisprudence in the Law School and Department of Political Science at the University of Chicago. He is author of the forthcoming After the Rights Revolution: Reconceiving the Regulatory State (1990) and co-author of Constitutional Law (1986).

Sanford Levinson, Charles Tilford McCormick Professor of Law at the University of Texas Law School, is co-author of Constitutional Faith (Princeton University Press, 1988) and co-editor, with Steven Mailloux, of Interpreting Law and Literature: A Hermeneutic Reader (Northwestern University Press, 1988).

Robert A. Burt is Southmayd Professor of Law at Yale Law School.

Elaine Scarry is Professor of English and American Literature at Harvard University.

Peter Brooks teaches French and Comparative Literature at Yale University and is director of the Whitney Humanities Center. His most recent book is Reading for the Plot: Design and Intention in Narrative.

Gayatri Chakravorty Spivak is currently Andrew W. Mellon Professor of English and Director of the Program for the Study of Culture at the University of Pittsburgh. She has published extensively on topics relating to deconstruction, the critique of imperialism, and feminism-Marxism. In 1976 she published a translation with critical introduction of Jacques Derrida's De la grammatologie. Her most recent book is In Other Worlds: Essays in Cultural Poitics (1987); her forthcoming book is entitled Riding on the Hyphen: Deconstruction in the Service of Reading, one of whose objects of investigation is "the production of international feminism."

Louis Michael Seidman is Professor of Law at Georgetown University Law Center. He received his A.B. from the University of Chicago in 1968 and his J.D., magna cum laude, from Harvard Law School in 1971. He has been a law clerk for J. Skelly Wright (1971-72) and for Thurgood Marshall (1972-73). He was a staff attorney with the District of Columbia Public Defender Service from 1973 to 1976.

Anita Sokolsky is Associate Professor of English at Williams College. She is currently writing about models of political crisis in thirties screwball film comedies and in novels by George Eliot and Henry James. She has also written on modern and contemporary poetry.

Robert A. Ferguson is George Edward Woodberry Professor in the Department of English and Comparative Literature and the Law School of Columbia University.

Judith Resnik is Orrin B. Evans Professor of Law at the University of Southern California Law Center.