

Contributors' Notes

Peter Brooks is Tripp Professor of Humanities at Yale University and lecturer in the Yale Law School. His books include READING FOR THE PLOT; THE MELODRAMATIC IMAGINATION; and BODY WORK, PSYCHOANALYSIS AND STORYTELLING. He is co-editor with Paul Gewirtz of the forthcoming LAW'S STORIES (Yale University Press).

Stacy Caplow is Professor of Law and Director of Clinical Education at Brooklyn Law School.

Mary Coombs is Professor of Law at the University of Miami. She has written on a variety of topics in feminist and other outsider scholarship, and is working on a book on criminal law and the family.

Janet E. Halley has repeatedly manifested a propensity to write about queer legal theory and practice. She was a founding editor of the Yale Journal of Law & the Humanities.

Louise A. Halper is Assistant Professor of Law at Washington & Lee University School of Law. Her current work focuses on the social construction of nature. Her interests include property, environmental law, and legal history.

Angela P. Harris is Professor of Law at the University of California, Berkeley School of Law (Boalt Hall). Her research interests are in feminist jurisprudence and critical race theory. She is currently on leave at the Stanford Humanities Center, where she is at work on a book tentatively entitled WHAT WE TALK ABOUT WHEN WE TALK ABOUT RACE.

Colin Moran is currently a second year law student at Stanford Law School. He received a B.A. from Duke University in 1992 and a M.St. from Oxford University in 1995.

Robert J. Morris is a practicing attorney in Honolulu, specializing in real estate and international law. He is one of the legal counsel to the Hawai'i State House of Representatives, and is a special deputy to the Hawai'i Attorney General. He teaches various aspects of the law part-time at the University of Hawai'i, Hawai'i Pacific University, and the Community Colleges throughout O'ahu. He is a degree candidate in Hawaiian language at the University of Hawai'i, specializing in research using primary Hawaiian-language documents. He is involved in Native Hawaiian land claims and has taught related subjects at the Kamehameha Schools. He is a consultant to the Hawai'i Equal Rights Marriage Project.

W. J. Rorobough is Professor of History at the University of Washington.

Francisco Valdes is Professor of Law at California Western School of Law in San Diego, and is currently visiting at the University of Miami School of Law. He serves on the Executive Board of the Section on Gay and Lesbian Legal Issues of the American Association of Law Schools, and on the State Bar of California Standing Committee on Sexual Orientation Discrimination. His research interests cluster around constitutional law and civil rights.

Spencer Weber Waller is Professor of Law at Brooklyn Law School and is co-editor of BASEBALL AND THE AMERICAN LEGAL MIND.